

The Old and New Year.

Again, the wheels of Time, that pass not, and rest not, have brought us to the threshold of another year. As we look around us, at the untroubled blue of the sky, and the almost untroubled verdure of the landscape, as we feel the penetrating warmth of the sunshine, we can scarcely realize that this is the season of mid-winter, but seem transported to some far island in the tropics, the land of the palm trees and orange groves, where the blasts and snows of winter are unknown.

The year that has just sealed up its record has been one of remarkable storms, on sea and land, as well as floods, and their devastations and excesses will long be remembered, especially in the annals of New England. Several earthquakes have visited our continent as well as Europe, but they were only vibratory movements and did not rock the earth like those of the previous year on the South American Coast.

The year 1869 will be ever memorable in civil affairs—the year when the Suez Canal and the Pacific Railroad were completed, opening new paths to commerce and binding the East to the West by the most intimate and enduring ties. It will also be famous in religious history for the Ecumenical Council at Rome and for the defection and revolt of Pope Hyacinth, the most eloquent of modern preachers, from the ecclesiastical authority and discipline of the Catholic Church, and for the initiation of a religious-political contest in this country over the Bible in Schools. Abroad, the surface of the political waters is smooth, but it is a deceitful calm; there is a deep-seated unrest among the peoples, which—unless pacified by liberal concessions, to popular rights—may yet upheave aristocratic powers, and all the splendid and imposing forms of tyranny and usurpation.

In our own country we have had a year of plenty, of peace and prosperity. The September panic in gold and stocks was limited in its influence and duration. The public debt of the country is rapidly diminishing, by virtue of the growing wealth and resources of the country and the faithful execution of the laws. The mania of speculation, together with a lavish extravagance in all the modes of artificial life, have visibly declined within the past twelve months. The partisan prophecy that President Grant would turn a Cuckoo, and trample out our Republican liberties, has so far received no symptom of attestation; on the other hand, the Executive seems to be on terms of the most cordial confidence with all branches of the Government, with all classes of the people. Death has been busy with his reaper, in 1869. The celestial fire of Humboldt no longer glows in the firmament of science. The voice of Derby no longer thunders in debate. The liberal hand of Peabody, that scattered his princely bounty, is now cold and pulseless. General Wall and Admiral Stewart, triumphant over the enemies of their country have yielded up their lives to the last conqueror. Rawlins, too, the modest and beloved, true as steel, and faithful as the sun to duty, has been gathered to the sepulchre of his fathers. Raymond, the versatile journalist, Brady, the prince of advocates, are no more. We cannot count all the graves. But Stanton's grave is the greenest, and of all the illustrious dead he was and in the most heroic mould. "Take him all in all, we shall not look upon his like again."

The year that is past has not been one of railroad slaughter, as its predecessor was, but was saddened by the Avondale and other mining horrors, against the repetition of which, let us trust, the Pennsylvania Legislature may earnestly seek to provide.

On this New Year's Day many familiar faces that shrouded a year ago will be missed, and we have to reflect upon some terrible local disasters. But our city has made marked progress, and improvement the past year, in which every citizen may indulge a local pride, and which augur well for the immediate future of Titusville.

MISSRS. McFARLAND, SMITH & CO.—Among the important business changes of the season, there is none of more general interest to the public at large than that which recently inaugurated the above named firm, who bring their banner to the breeze with the new year amid the most promising auguries of success. The old and favorite clothing establishment of J. A. Loebe, so well known throughout the surrounding country, that even a brief mention of it is needless, and there is no one who will not tender to the retiring and journeying proprietor the good wishes for success that always accompany strict integrity and careful attention to the wants of a business community. Of the new firm, John D. McFarland, formerly of New York, and of late a resident of the oil region, brings that tact and commercial enterprise that are well known to the circles in which he has moved, while Eugene L. Smith enjoys a business experience of over five years in the establishment which now bears his name, and possesses an enviable professional acquaintance with nearly every business man in the oil country. N. Irwin Shugart, the third partner, besides an extensive acquaintance, has served in a commercial capacity for several years in the city and as book-keeper in the Second National Bank.

The salesmen will be presided over also by Messrs. R. I. and A. J. Shugart, both gentlemen of experience in the trade they represent, while the book-keeping and other multifarious duties of the office will be continued as heretofore under the able supervision of Frank Lake.

Messrs. McFarland, Smith & Co., who are making large additions to the fine stock already selected for the winter, are in an elegant manner, and making special improvements in the various departments of their establishment that cannot fail to add to their attractiveness and the convenience of customers.

The custom department will be made the especial feature of the new house, and the most fashionable enter and experienced workman only, will be employed in the shops upon this branch, which is fast assuming formidable proportions.

Another speciality is the establishing of a buyer in New York, whose entire attention will be confined to purchasing the best and most stylish suits and cloths, which, with a complete assortment of gents' furnishings goods, cannot fail to offer superior inducements to those who delight in fine goods or elegant apparel. We wish the new firm success.

The Midland Railroad has completed and tested its bridge over Lyon Creek, east of Norwich 2 1/2 miles that the road is virtually finished from Oswego to Sidney Plains, where it crosses the Susquehanna River and Railroad. Thence to Middleton, on the Erie Road, it crosses the rugged hills and deep valleys of Delaware and Sullivan counties, which render heavy cutting and some tunneling necessary; but its successful completion leaves cars running from Lake Ontario to the Hudson at Jersey City by the end of 1870. They have been enabled to push the work thus vigorously by liberal subscriptions to their first and only mortgage bonds, and we hope will thus be enabled to commence running through trains entirely free from floating debt.

FRESH oysters received daily at Shank's. All oysters warranted fresh and well filled.

On and after this date for sixty days we offer the usual inducements in the way of low prices to close out the balance of our winter stock.

CO-PARTNERSHIP.—The undersigned having this day purchased the stock, good will, &c., formerly owned by J. A. Loebe, in the general clothing, hats, caps, and gents' furnishing goods business, have formed a co-partnership under the firm name of McFarland, Smith & Co., and will continue the business at the old stand, corner of Spring and Franklin streets. Outstanding accounts will be collected and adjusted by the new firm.

JOHN D. McFARLAND, EUGENE L. SMITH, N. IRWIN SHUGART.

Titusville, Pa., Dec. 29, 1869.

Pennsylvania "Oil Slang."

Since the California gold excitement, or the period that marked the close of the war for the preservation of the Union, it may be doubted if there is any portion of the country that presents to such startling originality, in its geographical nomenclature, as that known as the Petroleum region of Pennsylvania. With a population comprising representatives from every State in the Union, it is not to be wondered at that the already famous vocabulary of the original "Duckwheat" should be improved by such additions as the veteran "Pacific sloper" could suggest from former experience, assisted by the local euphemisms, of the demoralized Yankee fresh from scenes of strife, and who only dropped the weapons lifted in his defence of the country, to wield the cudgel against Pinneo and Webster's unabridged. California and the Southern States each have their vocabulary of slang and uncouth phrases peculiar to the respective sections; and the reader is doubtless familiar with the original and exquisite American names of Scratch Gravel—Pinchout—Lick Skillet—Buckmoot—Nip and Tuck—Hog Eye—Slum Gullion—Poverty Slant—Shake Rag—Rake Pocket—Steel Easy—Dead Horse Gulch—and Righteous Ridge of Eldorado fame.

The "forty niners" who still live will recognize many of these localities as the scene of blisful or bitter pioneer experience in the excitement of that year; and where does there exist a veteran soldier or "bummer," whether a "dough boy" belonging to the "stick in the muds" (as the infantry of the Potomac army were affectionately termed), or a regular "critter lack" "git up and gitter" fresh from cavalry campaigns in Sherman's front. Who does not remember Bazzard's Roost, Suckersville, Snake Gap, Rattlesnake town and Bull's Gap—names that will live in history because of the mighty events and scenes of bloodshed that marked their existence in the war just closed?

In geography the oil operator is not behind his predecessors in the construction of names and phrases, and the number of jaw-breaking, Webster-defying forms of speech, is fully equal to any that have previously existed, while many of the same exhibit a knowledge of "the eternal fitness of things" that is surprising. Pinhole City, inelegant as the name is, was honestly obtained, and will long mark the history of the greatest excitement and speculation of the age. Oil City, Oilopolis, and Petroleum Centre, are names in keeping with the business and daily pursuits of their inhabitants, while Shamberg borrows its name, in a pecuniary sense at least.

Tar Farm was not so named from its being the source of the North Carolina product, but bears its owner's name, an individual who was quite willing to exchange his sterile acres for an equivalent in greenbacks representing the natural lubricator afterwards produced.

Among later choice additions to village nomenclature come Red Hot, Alleghenian Oil City, and Dry Up—each the cognomen of a business center, and oil producing district.

"Jerusalem Four Corners" is but a short distance from "Red Hot" while Bull, Cove and Gulf Runs, follow each other in a joyful but eccentricity.

From "Tidiloute to Sunbucra," is equivalent to the term, from Dan to Beersheba, of sacred history, the former marking the boundaries of the producing districts on the Allegheny River.

"Babylon," like its namesake of old, was indeed a city of the fallen; like it, also, met with a speedy destruction from the inhabitants thereof.

Enterprise thrives beneath its name, and the industry of the residents—while Pleasantville has not proven a fleeting pleasure to original holders of land and property.

In the christening of wells, and petroleum organizations, the oil operator is not deficient. Among the former—the Pool, the "Twins"—Gusher—Buster—Coquette—Pocket Limer—and Flow Eye, are well known in the annals of oil history; while the Niagara, Ocean, Fountain, and Deluge Petroleum Companies bear an equally important part in the history of the producing districts.

The original inhabitant clings fondly to the phrases of his forefathers, and the "Duckwheat" no sooner sees symptoms of a "grease apoplexy" on his farm, than he enters the ring, and if he can raise the "mud" the load of "Bukin a flitting" indicates a removal of household effects and furniture to "America," or other part of the country outside of oildom.

The Pennsylvania does not saw wood, but "backs it," and a "shovel" of Eastern manufacture becomes a "spade" by transition to this section. His "discombobulators" some things, and "forget to think" of others.

"Where have you been at?" indicates a desire to know the previous whereabouts of the individual questioned and to "return back home" means to take a fresh start for the paternal mansion.

Business is never lively—it is "booming," and the extremes of the well digger's luck are expressed in the terms: "Not worth a smell" and "a big thing."

The operator does not drill a well—he "puts it down" or "kicks it down"—and if in the "best" there is "grout" enough to "put out a bad bug's eye" he prosecutes his developments with renewed vigor. This moment a well produces oil in paying quantities its sex is established and "ghe" becomes the pet of the owner; but without the oil "it" dwindles to a nuisance; and non-paying gander as a "dry hole."

The workman on a well does not work by the hour, or relief—but "goes on tower" or "stands his trick"—with the regularity of a picket guard. His engine house is a "shebang" and his boarding house known only as a "mutton mill" or "hash factory"—while the "gin mill" denotes the spot where he takes his "benzene," "blazes his oil-glycerine," or indulges in "Oil Creek oiling," all synonymous with taking a drink.

Like his Wall street brother, the gambler in "crude," "sells short," "corners," becomes a bull or bear, as occasion requires, and in ready-made abbreviations rivals the gold room operator.

The "greaser" produces the oil, and the "shark" speculates in the same.

Government bonds are known as "Bunnings-hoff's Maps" throughout the region. Pugnacious individuals do not fight, but "snatch each other by the head," or "pulls his adversary's nose" all over his face, or "carries him down with a six shooter." The individual who is correct in his views is "mighty right."

The man who has made a fortune is never rich, but he has "lead loads of stumps," or "awful" of it, and he does not carry a pocket book, but "sucks it away in his stocking leg."

The speculator does not make a bargain with another, he "strikes him" for some stated amount, or "blitters" him.

This catalogue might be prolonged indefinitely. Many of the most original have escaped notice, but enough are given to establish the oil country as a rival dispensary for English idioms, against the south and western frontiers that have long since borne an unenviable reputation in that line.

SWEET potatoes, cranberries, celery, oranges, lemons, coconuts, and all kinds of fruit and vegetables at Shank's, Diamond street.

LIEUT. MILLS.—Two following paragraph, clipped from the Dardanelle Times (Arkansas), shows that the sea of our esteemed townsman, Major Mills, is winning "golden opinions" from the Western people for soldierly gallantry and patriotic conduct. We quote:

Lieut. Samuel M. Mills, U. S. A., passed through here this week on his return to Little Rock from a journey west, where he had been on Government business. Lieut. Mills graduated at the National Military Academy with distinguished honor; but at too late a day for so large a share of the laurels as had been assigned gathered by his predecessors. Notwithstanding, however, the fact that armed resistance to the Republic had well-nigh caused him, Lieut. Mills entered upon active service, its lingering existence was of sufficient duration to establish the gallantry and patriotism of the young hero.

Since the cessation of hostilities, Lieut. Mills has been on duty in Arkansas, and we assert advisedly it to be the opinion of the Unionists of this Commonwealth that Lieut. Mills, by his efficient discharge of the important duties of Adjutant, contributed more than any other subaltern to the splendid success which rewarded the untiring endeavors of Major General Charles H. Smith to restore the State to its place in the Federal Union. It is natural that every friend of the Government in Arkansas should feel the kindest interest in the future of those officers who in the past have served the cause so well; but we are confident that no one will fail to be gratified to learn that no more heartily accorded than it is to this gentleman, by whom it is so well deserved.
